History in ACTION

Coercion and Consent in Nazi Germany / Richard J Evans

How far did Adolf Hitler and the Nazi State use terror and violence to impose their policies and ideology on the German people? How popular really was the Third Reich? Was it a totalitarian state or a 'dictatorship by consent'?

Sir Richard J Evans is President of Wolfson College, Cambridge and Provost of Gresham College in London. His research interests are modern German and European history, particularly social and cultural history. He has published widely,

World War One – Impact and Responses / Gary Sheffield

Professor Gary Sheffield will discuss the First World War, including its impact on Germany and across the globe.

Gary Sheffield is a military historian who is considered one of Britain's foremost experts on the First World War. He has published widely and contributes frequently to newspapers and journals.

History of a Modern European Genocide: 1933-1945 / Anna Hajkova

The Holocaust is a highly charged but intellectually crucial part of history. This session introduces the audience to Jewish German history, the rise of Nazi anti-Semitism, social exclusion, forced emigration, concentration camps, deportations, mass murder and gender history.

Dr Anna Hájková is Assistant Professor of Modern Continental history at the University of Warwick. Her work examines concentration camps, Jewish social and political elites, issues of nationalism and ethnicity, gender and sexuality.

The Legacy of the First World War for the Weimar Republic / Matthew Stibbe

This lecture will challenge the notion that the Versailles settlement and reparations led directly to the collapse of the Weimar Republic, while also explaining why the divided memory of the war nonetheless ultimately played into the hands of the Nazis.

Matthew Stibbe is Professor of Modern European History at Sheffield Hallam University, specialising in twentieth-century Germany. His many books include Women in the Third Reich and Germany 1914-1933: Politics, Society and Culture.
